The Cathedral, in many respects, is the most conspicuous building in Manila. The original structure, erected centuries ago, was damaged from time to time by earthquakes, which finally destroyed it. The new Cathedral, adjoining the ruins of the old edifice, is built of brick and stone, and the general design is that of a cross, surmounted by a great dome. The Cathedral is the most fashionable church in Manila, and is celebrated for the splendour of its altars and interior decorations. Most of the religious processions, for which Manila is famous, begin and end at its doors.
